

Absolutely! Here's a draft for UMOJI's press release:

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Website: <https://www.umojienergy.com/>

UMOJI: Transforming Lives Through Reintegration and Community Building

Albany, Oregon – May 11, 2025 – UMOJI, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, is proud to announce its ongoing commitment to transforming the lives of adults released from incarceration through innovative reintegration programs, mentorship, and community-driven initiatives. Since its establishment in 2023, UMOJI has provided vital support to over 9,206 individuals globally, including 1,000 locally in Oregon.

With a mission to foster self-autonomy and sustainability, UMOJI offers a comprehensive suite of services, including leagues, clinics, curriculums, bootcamps, apprenticeships, and 24/7/365 support systems. These programs are designed to address the unique challenges faced by formerly incarcerated individuals, providing them with the tools and resources needed to reintegrate successfully into society.

“Our vision is to build a $50 billion community-driven economy that empowers individuals and fosters holistic development,” said [Your Name], [Your Title] at UMOJI. “Through AI integration, strategic partnerships, and innovative programs, we are creating opportunities for those who need it most while building a sustainable future for communities worldwide.”

UMOJI’s services are currently active in six Oregon locations, including Corvallis, Albany, Redmond, Bend, Portland, and Salem, with plans to expand to all 50 states, U.S. territories, and 193 countries. The organization’s apprenticeship programs span multiple industries, such as carpentry, social media, and urban farming, ensuring participants gain valuable skills and employment opportunities.

In addition to its reintegration programs, UMOJI is committed to green living and sustainability through its ecovillage initiatives. These eco-friendly communities feature spa retreats, food forests, urban farming, and vegetarian/vegan culinary options, creating harmonious environments for residents.

To support its mission, UMOJI relies on funding from founders, grants, in-kind donations, and partnerships with organizations like the USDA and DOJ. The nonprofit also aims to diversify its revenue streams through merchandise sales and apprenticeship contracts.

UMOJI invites individuals, organizations, and communities to join its mission by donating, volunteering, or partnering to create a brighter future for those seeking a second chance.

For more information about UMOJI and its programs, please visit
[\[https://www.umojienergy.com/\]\(https://www.umojienergy.com/\)](https://www.umojienergy.com/).

About UMOJI

UMOJI is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization based in Albany, Oregon, dedicated to helping adults released from incarceration reintegrate into society through support programs, mentorship, and community building. Established in 2023, UMOJI strives to create a sustainable, community-driven economy while fostering self-autonomy and holistic development.
